

This weekend the Festival of Speed will be taking place at the Montmeló circuit in Barcelona, marking the 2017 Season finale for the Blancpain Endurance Series. Andy Soucek and his Teammates Soulet and Abril will be fighting hard to give Bentley Team M-Sport their first championship title.

The Bentley Boys arrive at the track full of confidence, after holding a successful test day where the Continental GT3 was able to put up great performance. They are also certain that second place in the overall standings is secured, but remain fully focussed on finishing in front of the Lamborghini #63 to clinch the title.

On top of that, Soucek counts on the warm support of his fans, sponsors, friends and family to end the day with another celebration at his “home” track, where he has secured several championship titles in the past: Spanish F3 in 2005, World Series by Renault Team standings in 2006 and the FIA Formula 2 in 2009.

The Qualifying session will start on Sunday morning at 09:00 CET and the three-hour race is scheduled to begin at 15:00 CET on that same day.

A live stream of the event will be available at <http://www.blancpain-gt-series.com/live> and Eurosport2 will be showing the last 90 minutes of the race starting at 16:30 CET
